SHE WRITES ON HER ELOPEMENT.

PRADE LADY AYLESFORD: By the time this letter reaches you I shall have left my home forsers. Guernsey knows of this, which will account for his telegram to you. I do not attempt to say word in self-defence, but you can imagine I a must have suffered much before I could take such a step, how much it would be impossible to tell you, but it is the only reparation I can make to Guernsey, and he will now have the opportunity of getting rid of one whom he has long ceased to care for. You do not know, and you never can know, how hard I have tried to win his love, and without success, and I cannot live uncared for. I do not ask you to think kindly of me: Il know you could not do it; but for God's make be kind to the children, and do not teach them to have their wretched mother, and let them think I am dond, it will be best. I heard from Minna the other day, but nover answered her letter; sho will now know why. You have always been most kind to me, and it is the last word I shall ever say to you. Do not be offended if I thank you for all your kindness and tell you how very wretched it makes me to think that I should have brought such serrow and disgrace upon you all; and oh, Lady Aylesford, if It is possible, try and forgive me as you hope for forgiveness. I know that Guernsey does not care forme, therefore I do not think he will feel my loss, and perhaps may be glad to be free; but what it costs me to leave my children I cannot hely you, and I cannot bear to think. That they will be well cared for I know, as you will be well cared for I know, as you will be a well cared for I know, as you will be a real cared for I know, as you will be a well cared for I know, as you will be a well cared for I know, as you will be a well cared for I know, as you will be a well cared for I know, as you will be a well cared for I know, as you will be well cared to the hims. That they did the diamonds with James, and as regards the things belonging to me, I have seen you, but f but, I would have seen you, but I feel that perhaps you dear Lady Aylesford, and for the last time farewell, and try not to think too hardly of EDITH.

DEAREST LADY AYLESPORD: I must write to you for the last time to thank you, oh! to thank you so, so much for yourgoodness to me. I have not deserved it from you, and I have not been a good daughter-in-law to you, and you have been agood with the your wretched child lives she never, never will forgot the love you have shown my, notwith-standing all she has done. I know how sorry you are for me, and how little I deserve it, and, my God! If it had been possible for me to give him up I would have done it, if it had only been for the angelic way you have behaved to me. But, darling Lady Aylesford, I cannot tell you how awfully I love him; it is the only excuse I am able to give you. Say good-by to the Colonel for me. I think he liked me, and will be so sorry for me. I could not see him myself-good-bys are so dreadful when it is parting forever. Dearest Minna, ask her to forgive me for the disgrace I have brought on her; she knows now why I could not answer her letters. I am going to Wales to-morrow as Blandford cannot break his word, and it would only make matters worse. Lord Handelph is very gensible, and knows better than I do what should be done. I send you the dressing case and enclose the key, the hand looking glass James has it, and it was broken, and I gave it to him to have it mended. I should like darling Hilda to have the dressing case, please. I have asked Guernsey in my letter to have if he should refuse. I shall not send my letters to James until my return. My letter to Guernsey I will send you will not I know if he should r

4. Small locket with diamonds and pearls,
5. Ditto with sapphire and diamonds.
6. Oval locket with sapphire and diamond horseshee. The two lockets in cases are those given to Alexandra at her christening. James has the gold mug that Minna gave to her.
I do hope and beg for Guernsey's sake that you will say nothing about this just at present, and if you take the children please do not let the servants at Packington know for what reason, but let them think they are going to you for a change, as since I have arrived in London I have thought it best not to tell them just at I have thought it best not to tell them just at present that I have left for good. My sisters and friends think they may patch it up, and, I believe, have telegraphed to Guernsey to alter his decision, and I am bound by a solema promise not to leave till his answer arrives, and therefore shall remain quietly in London until it does arrive.

It does arrive.

I do not tell you my address, as I feel it could only be painful for us to meet, and I do not suppose for a moment you would wish to see me, but I think you will understand my reasons for not wishing it to be known just at present. SHE PLEADS FOR MERCY. 3 MORTAR-CRESCENT, EXMOUTH,

SHE PLEADS FOR MERCY.

3 MORTAR-CRESCENT, EXMOUTH.

Wednesday, 17.

Dear Lady Aylespond: I must write and ask you if you can in any way use your influence with Guernsey to stop him from fighting the Queen's Proctor. He will not gain the case, and it will be so dreadful to have the whole thing made so public as a defended suit will entail. I do not know for certain who it was who instructed the Queen's Proctor, but have heard from several people that it is Mrs. Dilar's brother-in-law. But the Queen's Proctor has a strong case against him, the first being collusion, which alone is enough to stop him getting his divorce, but I hear that he is determined, nevertheless, to fight him. I cannot say how sorry I am that he should do so, it will be so dreadful having a case of that sort in the papers. I never dreamed for one moment that it the Queen's Proctor intervened that he would fight the case. If he had any chance of gaining it would be, perhaps, worth his trouble: but, from what I am told, he cannot. Can no one do anything to stop him? I am so sorry, too dear Lady Aylesford, for your sake, as it will be most disagreeable for you and for me; it will be dreadful for me—must drive me from England. I could not romain, of course, with a case of that sort going on. You will say, perhaps, that it is my own fault, and so it is, of course; but it does not make it less hard for all that, and I would have done anything to have prevented a defended suit if I ever had dreamed that there would have been one, for, as I told you, I should never have defended it. I hope my children are well, and that Aexandra is less frettish than she was. Oh, dear Lady Aylesford, I am so sorry for all this trouble I have caused you, or if nothing will stop Guernsey, it will, indeed, be dreadful. Perhaps if you went to him and Minna also and implore him for all your sakes to withdraw, it might stop him; there is no time to be lock, as the Queen's Proctor has delivered his pleas, so that it may come on any day. Yours affectionally,

SHE BEGS TO SEE HER CHILDREN.

MONDAY, 24-79, 11 PORTUGAL STREET, W.

DEAR LADY AYLESPORD: I must say that I think your letter most unfeeling. There can be no sort of reason why I should not be permitted to see my children, or, in fact, as I am advised, no legal reason why they should not be with me. You must bear in mind that I am not divorced from Aylesford, and that theterms not divorced from Aylesford, and that theterms of our separation do not preclude my having the custody of the children; and my solisitors tell me the Court of Chancery would not only order that I should at all times have access to them, but that they should for limited periods reside with me. I cannot agree with you that it is desirable they should not know their mother during their childhood; on the contrary, far better that they should know my harm than that they should grow up to learn the truth and not even know their mother by sight. Of course it will be very disagreeable for me to have recourse to law; but if you still refuse to send them to see me, I have no alternative but to do so. I remain yours truly.

E. Aylespord.

Brookfield, Colnbrook, Bucks. SHE BEGS TO SEE HER CHILDREN.

likooryield, Colnbrook, BucksDean Lady Aylespord: I have not heard for some time of my children, and I have not wished to trouble you by writing. But I write how to say that Soton Montgomerie saw Guernsey a short time ago, and asked him from me if he would not let me have my children, and his answer was that I was quite welcome. for all he cared, and that I had better ask you for them; that being the case, of course, you will not object to let me have them, for I have taken a small place near Windson, and it is so lonely and wretched having nothing belonging to me to care for that it will be a great thing for me to have them as companions, and, of course, I should always send them to see you whenever you wished. If you do not like to part with both of them at once, if you would send me one at first, perhaps it would be best, and, if so, I should prefer to have the youngest. I know that you will not like parting with them, but I am sure you must feel that whatever the mother's faults may have been she is the right person to have them, and as the father does not care for them they will at least have a mother who will care for them. Yours sincerely, as the lather does not care for them they will at least have a mother who will care for them. Yours sincerely.

Oak Cottage, Windson, Thursday.

Dear Lady Aylestord: You have always been very kind to me, notwithstanding all the trouble I have caused you, so I do not think that you will refuse me when I say I should very much like to ase, you, for I have two or three things I should like to ask you. Lord Blandford and I have parted, or I would not dare ask you this favor. If you will grant my request and say when it would suit you best to see me I will be there. I need not tell you how utterly miserable and wretched I am, but it is not to bore you with my sorrows that I ask to see you, but as I am going to live quite away I should like very much to see you once before I go. Yours affectionately.

Dear Lady Aylestord: Thank you very much for the photograph. I am so glad to hear that Hilda is getting on so nicely. I am sure she is a sharr child and will learn quickly. It is strange that Alex's eyes should have become brown, as they were such a bright blue when she was born, and I fancied she was more like her father than Hilda. Does Guernsey care of his children, and does he often go to see them? Because, although we are parted I should like to feel that he is fond of them and does not hate them because they are mine, With very best wishes to you all for the new year, believe me, yours affectionately. Entru.

11 PORTUGAL STREET, W.,

DEAR LADY AYLESFORD: I write to beg that you will be so good as to send my children one day to see me. It is some years since I have seen them, and I shall be glad to see how they are getting on. It is true that in the first instance I said it was perhaps best, under the circumstances, that they should not know me, but matters have changed since those times, and as I am living quite alone and independently. I shall be glad to see hem made, will you kindly let me know when it will be convenient for you to send them? I remain, yours truly.

E. AYLESFORD.

STORY OF THE SHOOTING.

Martin G. Tiernoy Held for Ktilling William Kelly in a Saloon Brawl.

Coroner Kennedy held an inquest yesterday in the case of William Kelly of 301 East Thirty-fifth street, who was shot in Birmingham & Mooney's saloon, at Thirty-fourth street and Third avenue, on July 1, and died the following evening in Believue Hospital. The sister of the dead man, a pretty girl, 16 years old. asked the Coroner if she might say something in behalf of her brother. The request was granted, and she then, with trembling voice and streaming eyes, said that her brother was a good man, and worked hard to support his mother and two sisters, and that Martin G. Tierney, who shot him, was a drinking man, who sang in saloons for a living, and that she did not think that her brother ought to have been killed by such a man.

Jeremiah Lyons, a hall boy in the Murray

Hill Hotel, said that at 3% A. M. on July 1 he and a party of friends went into Birmingham & Mooney's saloon and took a drink. There were about thirty men in the saloon. The wit-

I saw Kelly challengs a man named McCabe to wrestled the challenge was accepted, and both men clinched the challenge was accepted, and both men clinched the challenge was accepted, and both men clinched the challenge was the challenge and this time Kelly saw McCabe he renewed the challenge and this time Kelly wont down underneath, pulling McCabe with him. The latter, in trying to pull himself away, took Kelly saw McCabe he renewed the challenge and this time Kelly wont down underneath, pulling McCabe with him. The latter, in trying to pull himself away, took Kelly's coat. When Kelly got on his feet and looked at his torn coat he became angry, and said: "You you've torn my coat." Its struck at McCabe, and then several men tried to separate them. A man came from the rear of the bor, whom I recognize as the defendant Therney, and said to Kelly.

"Leave this man's watch alone."

Then Kelly broke looke from McCabe and shouted at Therney. What is that to you won the same time. Kelly and two or three others followed him. Therney pointed his revolver at Keily, asying: "Keep away from mo or I'll use this." Kelly continued to advance. I heard a shot and saw Kelly put his hand to his breast, and without a word leave the saloon.

Policeman Patrick Green said that Kelly, when confronted with Tlerney lator, said: "That is the min who shot me.

The jury found that Tlorney was not justified in using a pistol. Tierney was committed to the Tombs to await the action of the Grand Jury.

in the shop some boys who were playing ball accidentally hit the horse. He started down Third street toward the East River at a gallon. Near Avenue A he knocked down 9-year-old August Mannecke of 117 East Third street, cutting and bruising him.

One of the wagon wheels then took off the front wheel of Dr. Samuel Kohn's buggy, which was in front of licery Schmidt's drug store at Third street and Avenue A. The buggy was overturned, and Dr. Kohn's colored coachman was thrown out. Then the horse ran over the sidewalk into the south show window of the drug store, smashing it into fragments and badly cutting himself on the head and neck.

The runaway was caught before he could do any more damage. He was led to a veterinary surgeon, while Mr. Schmidt hurried down town to begin suit for damages against his
